HARVEST CELEBRATION.

The Salvation Army Makes its Annual Call for Donations for the Relief of the Poor.

With that indefatigable spirit and industry, equally defiant alike of the hot weather and its consequent problems. The Salvation Army steadily pursues its way, and taking advantage of the prevalent holiday spirit incorporates it in their aggressive plans and makes it a very factor in the furthering of their work; hence the Annual Harvest Festival, the very name of which is redolent of gracious memories and abundant tokens of the Great Givers' gracious provision for humanity.

Nothing could be more practical than the basis on which The Salvation Army Harvest Festival is worked. Thanks to the magnificent radius of the organization's splendid machinery now at work, no scheme acts as a self-feeder to many others. For instance, articles of furniture, groceries, clothing or anything of a suitable character can be donated, as what cannot be sold locally can be sold to the nearest large Salvation Army centre, where they are continually purchasing for the various Men's shelters, Women's institutions for philanthropic work. Live animals are heartily welcome, and amongst other gifts also agricultural implements, land, buildings; in fact, anything and everything required by humanity, all is heartily acceptable, and all is well utilized.

We append a full list of articles asked for: Fruit, flowers, canned goods, vegetables, fish, meat, chickens, live stock, corn, flour, wheat, oatmeal, condensed milk, bread, crackers, cheese, tea, coffee, cocoa, books, pictures, jewelry, shoes, coal, wood, lumber, shingles, chairs, sheets, blankets, cutlery, tools, furniture (new or used), clothing (new or second hand).

The accompanying list of figures gives a slight idea of the rapid development of this militant movement, and our readers are heartily invited in some way to assist the officers, remembering, too, that this particular effort is for the home work, for which there is a large field: 732 corps and outposts, 2,988 officers and employees, 45,000 annual conversions, 93,000 weekly circulation in English, German, Scandinavian and Chinese, 195 Social Relief institutions, 546 social officers and employees in charge, $253,000 annually spent in Poor Relief, 8,000 nightly accommodations for the poor, 2,500,000 beds annual accommodation, 60 workmen's hotels, 6 women's hotels, 24 food depots, 24 industrial homes for the unemployed, 3 farm colonies, 3,000 acres colonized, 320 colonists, 5 employment bureaux, 13 secondhand stores, 20 rescue homes for fallen women, accommodating 450 persons, 1,400 fallen women cared for each year, 24 slum settlements, with 80 officers in charge. A gold medal was awarded at the Paris Exposition for the United States Exhibit of the Salvation Army operations among the poor. The dates of the festival are September 7 to September 10.

BING-STOKE CO. DEPARTMENT STORE BUILDING.

A number of fine business blocks and dwelling houses have been erected in Reynoldsville within the past three years, but the only one we will mention at this time is the imposing stone and brick block that has been erected at corner of Main and Fifth streets by Ex-Mayor H. Alex. Stoke, and now occupied by the Bing-Stoke Co. Department store. Last year Mr. Stoke purchased what was called the "Bee Hive," a large two story frame building, which was somewhat dilapidated and was no longer much of a credit to the town. This building was moved to the rear of the corner lot on opposite side of Fifth street and was fitted up for dwelling rooms, &c., and on the old "Bee Hive" site now stands a magnificent business block that would be a credit to any town. The building is 60 feet wide, 75 feet deep, two stories high, with a basement under the entire building. The basement and first floor are used by Bing-Stoke Co. and the second floor contains eleven fine office rooms. The entire building is heated with steam and lighted with electricity. Mr. Stoke deserves praise and credit for being enterprising enough to erect such a fine structure. Thus, E. Evans, one of our contractors, put up this building for Mr. Stoke.

The Bing-Stoke Co., who occupy this new building, is composed of the following gentlemen: A. T. Bing president, Geo. W. Stoke, jr., vice-president, H. Alex. Stoke treasurer, and James W. Gillespie general manager. All members of the firm are experienced business men and genial gentlemen. With the exception of H. Alex. Stoke, the members of the firm devote their entire time and attention to the department store.

The first floor of Bing-Stoke Company's department store, dress and dry goods, notions, shoes, clothing and gents' furnishings, was opened early in April. Last week the basement department which is well stocked, was opened for business. This is a modern and up-to-date store, second to no other store in this section. It is equal to some of the large city stores and is conducted on good style. They carry a fine line of goods in every department. The first floor is fitted up with a good cash-carrier system.

Mr. Bing, formerly of the Bing & Co. dry goods firm, who has been in the mercantile business in this place over a score of years, has charge of the dry goods department. George W. Stoke, jr., formerly manager of Scott McClelland's large clothing store, has charge of the clothing department, and Mr. Gillespie, who had been clerking in Gusk's store in Pittsburgh eight into a dozen years, presides over the shoe department. Mr. Gillespie is a clerk for L. P. Seeley in this place twenty years ago and is not a stranger to many of the people of this section. Besides the proprietors, four clerks and a cashier assist in the store regularly and on special occasions three additional clerks work in the store. This new store is doing a good business, notwithstanding the fact that it is conducted on a strictly cash system.

LOCK HAVEN NORMAL.

Imposing Structures Present Magnificent Appearance—Institution is in Prosperous Condition.

As the scholarship contest in THE STAR advertised the Central State Normal School of Lock Haven extensively in this section, it might be well to give a partial description, at least, of the buildings and grounds of this great educational institution. The school occupies 27 acres of land and the site is peculiarly well chosen. The grounds sloping gently towards the river and art and nature have combined to make it beautiful and pleasing to the eye. The situation warrants perfect drainage and as a result there is no more healthful spot in that section of the state.

The base of the slope is occupied on the west by the athletic field of four acres in which is erected a neat covered grand stand capable of holding 200 people while the body of the field is fitted for the indulging of the national game—base ball. The eastern portion of the slope consists of a well kept lawn dotted with numerous shade trees and a number of tennis courts are interspersed for the habits of this gentler recreation. Crossing Fairview street the main buildings rises to your view from a gently rising lawn. Well made flagstone walks radiate in various directions and one leads to the main entrance. So modestly and tastefully is this building constructed that no adequate idea of its immense size is conveyed to you by the sense of sight, but there lies before you a central building 175x75 feet and attached to it and extending obliquely backward from each side are the ladies' and gentlemen's dormitories each 220x40 feet, which give an entire outside length of 800 feet, three stories high. The building is erected of brick with red sandstone trimming and is a masterpiece of architecture.

Entering the building the first room to the right is the reception room furnished with comfortable furniture adapted to the place. A doorway connects the reception room with the office which contains the principal's desk and a desk for the use of his secretary. This room is freely visited by the students as may be easily seen by a visitor, and it shows that Dr. Flickinger, the principal, keeps himself in close touch with his students. Opposite the reception room and across the hall is the public parlor, a magnificent room 40x22 feet, tastefully furnished and comfortable and inviting in its appearance. Its appearance denotes the broadminded and liberal policy inaugurated and followed by the management and this policy is shown by all the appointments of the institution.

Following the hall through the central building you pass four recitation rooms each fully equipped and specially adapted to their use. Six more recitation rooms are located on the second floor of the central building directly above those on the first floor, making a total of 10 recitation rooms in the main building. These rooms have solid slate blackboards on three sides of the room and are furnished with the latest improved folding recitation seats with tables. At the conjunction of the main hall and the halls from the dormitories are located, on the left, the steward's room, easy of access, as it is from this point that access is gained to the various parts of the building. On the left of the main hall opposite the steward's room is the reference library room containing the various encyclopedias and such books of reference as may be needed. They are for the use of the students. To the rear of this room is the book room where the text books and stationery are stored and sold to the students.

The main hall ends at the dining room doors. Entering these doors, you find yourself in a room 90x30 feet, well lighted on three sides. This room contains 44 tables and each table accommodates 10 persons, and a half regiment of soldiers could take their meals here at one sitting.

On the second floor of the central building and directly above the dining room is the chapel, into which is gathered every morning the entire body of students and faculty for chapel exercises.

The third floor is mainly taken up by the rooms of the literary societies of the schools—the Price society and the Shakespeare.

Radiating from the central building like huge antennae are the ladies' and gentlemen's dormitories, each 220 feet long, three stories high and each floor fitted with rooms for the accommodation of the pupils. Each story is bisected by a hall running the full length of the dormitory and connecting with its relative hall in the central building.

Opposite these series of buildings and to the rear of the ladies' dormitory is the gymnasium. In its style, finish and equipment it is possibly without a rival in this section of the country. It is an unbroken room whose dimensions are 90x100 feet. It has no ceiling and extends upward to the apex of the roof. The floor is fully equipped with gymnastic apparatus, while the basement contains bowling alleys and baths. The athletic work is all done under careful supervision and proves a constant source of benefit and enjoyment to the students.

The highest praise is due all those whose efforts have assisted in bringing this institution to its present high plane of influence, and its prosperous condition, without doubt assures its future success.

Dr. J. R. Flickinger, principal of the Lock Haven Normal, is a gentleman of culture, refinement and high attainments, and is well fitted for the position he holds. He is a graduate of Princeton University with several years of post-graduate work. Dr. Flickinger has had a large experience, both as a teacher and in active life, having been a member of the Pennsylvania and Colorado legislatures, and was one of the founders of the State Normal School in Colorado, and a trustee of the same. He is the author of a recent work on Civil Government that is receiving the encomiums of prominent teachers and others all over the United States. At the meeting of the Pennsylvania Educational Association in Philadelphia last month, Dr. Flickinger was elected president of the Association for the ensuing year.

The fall term of the Lock Haven Normal opens the 9th of September.
